Profile

The years I have spent in my career have made me a very self-motivated and hardworking individual, completing tasks by my peers and over watching delegated jobs to my subordinates to ensure they are done correctly, but most importantly, safely. Throughout my career I have successfully planned and executed critical operations. while constantly carrying out risk assessments in a forever changing environment and eliminating if not reducing hazards as low as reasonably practicable, taking the initiative but also working as part of a team, looking out for all my colleagues with their safety always in mind.

Key Skills

Career History

Commander in Special Weapons Company - 2010 - present

I have served for twelve years in the British Army in which for the past Ten years of my career my job role was a commander in the special weapons company. Because of my high work ethic and standards within my workplace, I was selected to join the Sniper Platoon. Only the top 5% are selected to be in this job role and even fewer pass the 12 Week arduous Sniper Course. This has given me a highly sought after set of skills that have made me very effective in Team Leadership, being very Versatile, Communication, Adaptability, but most of all being a highly motivated individual.

I have spent over six years of my career based overseas in various countries that include multiple deployments on large-scale battle group exercises and operational tours in Afghanistan. This has given me a lot of experience in team building, communication, problem solving, critical time management and completing tasks and missions given by my peers at a top level standard and a high attention to detail.
